- a. I have used Qwiklabs before for a Google IT Certificate and I have to say, I admire how well it supplies us with a real cloud environment. The labs had great content though and really dumb it down so that anyone can understand. The last lab was really well thought out and I really liked how they went from SQLServer to PostgreSQL.
- b. With all of the positive aspects listed above I should also mention that although I admire the environment it gives you, I don't like the layout it gives you as I prefer to set that up myself. Also the labs do have great content but it relies too much on the honor system because people can just skim through the directions and copy and paste the code they give for the most part.
- c. I actually do but I'm probably going to use it for AWS instead of GCP as jobs tend to lean towards AWS and Azure.
